Mr. Brown has just left, and he says they have decided to hire me to teach the district school, and they will pay me 25 a month. Hurrah, cried her husband, 20 a month! I suppose you will foot all the store bills and lay up a bank account for old age, i Now Jack, dont talk nonsense; this means so much to us. I know that we. will have to be very saving, but you can stay at home while I am teaching and fence the gardens. Then. if I should not get the school to teach next term, I could raise a market garden. You know I have a good opportunity here on the public road, and it is almost the only outlet to the county. Yes, Grace, I will fence the gardens while you are at home, but, when you are all at school, I will hunt tho shade. Well, replied his wife, I think that in this great, deep canyon you do not need any more shade than you are forced to take. When do they want the school to begin A week from Monday, and there is so much work to do, she said with a sigh. Yes, replied her husband, and you will need to go to town to buy you a wrapper or two to wear at school. Grace laughed softly to herself and wondered what her stylish Kastem friends would think if they could see her now in...
