Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 198 x 129 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .When a client of 11-year-old Lexie Thatcher s father is accused of murdering a female jogger, only two people believe that he is innocent - Lexie and the mother of the murdered girl. So Lexie does the only thing she can think of to help him: she calls her friend Ethan Blaine (also eleven) to help prove the feckless youth s innocence. With Ethan in London and Lexie in Devon, they work together by phone, pooling their talents - he the computer whiz kid with hacking skills and she the worldly bookworm - as they struggle to find the evidence that will clear the youth. At the same time, Ethan has become obsessed with a case that has been dominating the news: the deaths of drug users from contaminated drugs. What is particularly fascinating about these contaminated drugs deaths is that some one is sending cryptic messages to the press and the police in the form of poems. And Ethan is determined to decipher these messages, calling on Lexie and her encyclopaedic knowledge to help him in return for his help to her in the case of her father s client. But are the two cases connected? And can Ethan solve them from behind his computer or must he come out into the real world and put himself in danger as he did when he set out to clear his mother of murder charge and uncovered a baby-selling racket and corruption in high places? In this case, it s a no brainer. One stolen credit card and an airline flight to Scotland later, Ethan contrives to meet with a killer. (Formerly, Ethan and the Cryptic Clues) EXTRACT...
