Bulawayo, and as Mr. Hirschler, the Engineer of the mine, was willing to take upon himself the trouble of being our guide, we flung ourselves gladly upon his generosity. In one hour and a half we made the distance in a spring cart drawn by four spirited little mules. We halted at the Engineers station on a commanding grassy ridge, which neighbours that once occupied by Mosilikatses old kraal of Gubulawayo during the forties, fifties, and sixties of this century. A few spaces from the spot where we outspanned we came to a series of old workings which ran along the crest of the ridge for about 2000 ft. Where one of these old workings was untouched by the Engineer, it reminded me of just such a big hole as might have been made to unearth a boulder, or to root out a large tree. One of these hollows was chosen by the Engineer to sink his first shaft. After penetrating through fifty feet of debris, he came upon the reef which the ancients had abandoned because of flooding, and time, aided by rain, had filled up. He continued for about 10 ft. more, sampling every 3 ft. as he went to discover the grade of the ore. Since then he has sunk eight other shafts. The mine consists of 10 claims, but the development is concentrated on about twenty-five claims, ten of which are in the centre of the property, and fifteen towards...
